What's New in EdTech

NotebookLM Updates

Interactive Study Aids in NotebookLM

Google's NotebookLM now automatically generates interactive study aids like flashcards and quizzes from uploaded documents. It can also create reports with customizable structures, helping to create more engaging learning experiences for students.

Learn More

"Learning Guide" in NotebookLM

NotebookLM for Google Workspace for Education has a new "Learning Guide" feature. This feature encourages a deeper understanding of topics by asking students open-ended questions and breaking down complex problems.

Learn More

Create and Assign AI in Google Classroom

Educators can now create and assign interactive, AI-powered learning experiences, such as NotebookLMs and Gems, directly within Google Classroom. These tools are grounded in the class materials that educators provide, ensuring the content is relevant to the curriculum.

Gemini Updates

Shareable AI with Gems

Google Workspace users can now create and share customized versions of Gemini called "Gems". These can be shared with others both inside and outside their organization to help with specific tasks and promote AI adoption.

Learn More

Admin Controls for Gemini in Chrome

New admin controls for Gemini in Google Chrome are now available, allowing organizations to manage the AI-powered browsing assistant. Administrators can now enable or disable Gemini in Chrome separately from other platforms.

Learn More

Gemini Quizzes for Under 18

The quiz generation feature in the Gemini app is now available to users under 18 in the US. This allows students to create their own quizzes for studying, and educators can create and share quizzes with their classes.
